

50 Give or Take

Daily stories of fifty words or less straight into your inbox.

Curated by VineLeavesPress.com

Story No. 2146

The Anthill

A patient arrives carrying a box of soil and ants. We sit close. She places the box on her lap. It feels like I've swapped chairs.

"This is my vision board, what I want to become."

"Good," I say.

"No. Not an ant," she says, seriously. "The anthill instead."

Pamela Smith is a Dublin-based writer whose work explores inner worlds, disorders, and transformation, when she's not writing, she dreams.

Submit to 50 Give or Take. Please accompany your submission with a vertical colour photo of yourself, a one-line bio, and your website.

Don't let sit them in silence. Give them a voice. Make a secure online donation today and help Vine Leaves Press keep diversity alive in literature.

Do you like this story? Share it!

Vine Leaves Press
Konopisopoulou 31, 6th Floor, Athens
Greece

If you no longer wish to receive our emails, please click the link below to unsubscribe or change your reader preferences.

Update Subscriber Status