

50 Give or Take

Daily stories of fifty words or less straight into your inbox.

Curated by VineLeavesPress.com

Story No. 2138

Crisco

My aunt died two days ago. On the screen they say, "Possible rain this afternoon," then an ad pops up. Crisco. I think about making myself a sandwich. Just then, my cat jumps on me. I fall to the floor, but not because of him. My back locks. That's all.

Pamela Smith is a Dublin-based writer whose work explores disorder, and transformation.

Submit to 50 Give or Take. Please accompany your submission with a vertical colour photo of yourself, a one-line bio, and your website.

Don't let sit them in silence. Give them a voice. Make a secure online donation today. and help Vine Leaves Press keep diversity alive in literature.

Do you like this story? Share it!

Vine Leaves Press
Konopisopoulou 31, 6th Floor, Athens
Greece

If you no longer wish to receive our emails, please click the link below to unsubscribe or change your reader preferences.

Update Subscriber Status